

Some day Chicago's going to have a police force that will put a stop to highway robbery and murder.

No, we haven't the least idea when it will be.

Gov. Tasker L. Oddie, Nevada, looked at Niagara Falls and sighed: "Just think, I've got to pay 30 cents a gallon for that in Nevada."

But then, they don't drink much of it in Nevada, Task.

$111,358,000 worth of soap used in U. S. last year. Who'd have thought it.

Infanta Eulalia of Spain has written book on marriage. Her nephew, the kink, ordered her to suppress it. Eulalia told the kink to go to Halifax.

Rear Admiral George Francis, Faxon Wilde, U. S. N., died yesterday.

Chicago detectives say Hoopeston, Ill., known as the "holy city," is gamblers paradise.

Which is no reason these Chicago sleuths shouldn't dig out the skeleton in their cupboard.

Beef Trust attorneys filed motion in supreme court today asking the highest court to review habeas corpus proceedings.

Supreme court probably will do worse than review them.

My, but the King of Italy thinks a lot of Willie Hearst.

Mrs. Pearl D. Banker got divorce from Charles A. Banker, N. Y., at Reno yesterday. We refuse to make puns about bank wreckers.

REVIVAL OF THE BLOND

Shall the blond girl become only a memory and the world belong hereafter to brunettes and persons of neutral complexion? That is one of the live questions of the time that you may not have heard of.

Statistics show that the blonds of both sexes are becoming rarer than the proverbial hen's teeth. But there is hope of a turn in the tide.

A blond professor has established a Mecea in Austria where blonds of both sexes are urged to foregather, get married and revive the ranks of the waning complexion with generous progeny. Physical culture is taught in the hope of making the blond race graceful and strong.

Really it is a worthy enter-enterprise. It is no reflection on dark eyes and hair to say that it is nice to see an occasional pair of sky blue eyes, set off by a halo of golden hair—especially if it is real.

Don't envy the rich man. He is generally so practical that he can't ride a hobby horse. So what is the use.
